

When kids are trying to be stealthy about their homelessness, maybe it's because they're staying at a shelter, motel, storage unit or other place that is not a home. They often try to manipulate the school bus driver, asking to be dropped off a block away from their living arrangement. Kind bus drivers figure it out and try to comply.

We who think we know this issue, especially when it comes to schools, know that for every student that is identified as homeless under the McKinney-Vento provisions, at least one is not.
And that's just school-age kids. Do the math.
